

July 10, 2011, Daily News

Sunday, 10 July 2011

Last Updated Sunday, 10 July 2011

Former Telstra media director takes the helm at Quickflix

The Australian

This means compete with internet television (IPTV) offerings such as Telstra's T-Box, Foxtel and FetchTV. "There is no doubt we are moving in that direction," Mr Taylor said. "That said, the connectivity rates are still pretty low for IPTV in Australia ...

Former Telstra exec appointed CEO of Quickflix

Australian Techworld

Taylor held the position of director of Telstra Media, where he headed up the online and mobile digital publishing business, most notably launching the telco's IPTV services including streaming movies through the T-Box device, which was launched last ...

Quickflix hires another former Telstra media exec as CEO

iTWire

As director of Telstra Media, he was responsible for its online and mobile digital publishing business and for the launch of Telstra's IPTV services which included streaming movies through the T-Box and other connected platforms. ...

Nokia Siemens Networks provides GPON technology to Bulgarian ...

Balkans.com Business News - Michael Roberts - 16 minutes ago

EVO Ltd, a leading regional Internet Service Provider in Bulgaria, has started offering higher bandwidth and new, high-quality data services such as IPTV, ...

Microsoft selects Tech Mahindra to set up an authorised ECT Lab

Black Friday Deals - Sayani Pradhan

... authorised ECT (Encoder Conformance Testing) Lab for video encoders utilized in operation of IPTV solutions on the former's Mediaroom based platforms. ...

ITU launches global Application Challenge

Telecompaper (subscription)

Applicants are encouraged to think creatively about the IPTV platform and the ... While highlighting the expanding range of the IPTV ecosystem, ...

Cutting cable's cord isn't easy

BetaNews

Yesterday, I made the first steps to giving up cable -- OK, IPTV in my case -- and, whoa, it didn't go well. I planned to go completely cable-free, adopting over-the-air HD broadcasts and online streaming from Amazon, Hulu Plus and Netflix. ...