

Jan 15, 2012, Daily News

Sunday, 15 January 2012

Last Updated Sunday, 15 January 2012

IPTV licenses likely in next 2 months

Republica

KATHMANDU, Jan 15: Nine different operators who have applied and are waiting for more than a year for license to run Internet Protocol Television (IPTV) services are likely to receive operating licenses in next two months. IPTV allows customers having ...

BJP set to take hi-tech route in campaigning

Daily Pioneer

The BJP is all set to launch its own Internet Protocol (IP) TV – a dedicated news and views channel – that will be aggressively used in campaigning in the five States going to poll between January and March. IPTV is a system through which television ...

BT Vision gets social

Advanced Television

BT is to revamp its BT Vision IPTV service to offer a more personalised experience and social media elements, reports the FT. The move comes as competition in the UK pay-TV has increased with the launch of online movie and TV service Netflix, ...

Sigma, Qualcomm exhibit platform for Wi-Fi Display

Telecompaper (subscription)

Fabless semiconductor provider Sigma Designs and Qualcomm Atheros have jointly developed a Wi-Fi Display / DLNA IPTV reference design. ...

Give me my IPTV: Consumers prepared to do almost anything for ...

Herald Sun

You want Roku, you'll have to buy a set top box overseas as it's not available in Australia. Picture: Roku Source: Supplied CONSUMERS fed-up with waiting ...

BBC iPlayer sees record-breaking 2011, mobiles and connected TVs ...

Pocket-lint.com

This is matched by games consoles, also taking 5 per cent, with "IPTV devices" (eg BT Vision) claiming 4 per cent. A final "other devices" category claims ...

Panasonic Expands and Enhances Viera Connect's Video Social Experience

IEWY News

“VIERA Connect is a cloud based and a robust IPTV platform that lets ... Panasonic introduced its IPTV platform four years ago and in that time the internet ...