

May 23, 2014, Daily News

Friday, 23 May 2014

Last Updated Saturday, 24 May 2014

The Future of TV in Asia

Satellite Today

In China, new cable subscribers have slowed down significantly, due to direct competition from Internet Protocol Television (IPTV), and to some extent, online ...

Netflix's entry may boost the French SVOD market

StreamDaily

Rather, the company may divert audiences from cable, IPTV and dish TV channels that are sold in a bundle, or movie channels running second-window feature ...

Russian pay TV growth expected to slow this year

DigitalTVEurope.net

The growth rates experienced by each segment reversed that order. IPTV led the way with 47.2% growth, followed by satellite with 18.5% growth. Cable was ...

Spanish pay-TV decline intensifies

Advanced Television

On average, in Spain there are 8.1 pay TV subscribers per 100 inhabitants with satellite (Canal Plus) as the main choice to access to pay-TV content, with IPTV ...

A strange sense of familiarity

Telecoms.com

Ovum noted that leading US pay TV providers have seen stagnation in subscriber numbers since 2007, with growth in the sector dominated by telco IPTV plays, ...

BBC Trust reports back on YouView

IPTV News

The BBC Trust has endorsed the BBC's continuing participation in the internet-connected TV service YouView, subject to a number of conditions, in the findings ...

TiVo reports results for 2014

IPTV News

Tom Rogers, President and CEO of TiVo, says, "This was another solid quarter of execution for TiVo as total TiVo subscriptions reached a record 4.5 million, ...