

May 23, 2015, Daily News

Saturday, 23 May 2015

Last Updated Sunday, 24 May 2015

KPN offers free HBO for quad-play customers

Telecompaper (subscription)

KPN announced a new offer for its quad-play KPN Compleet customers. It already offered customers with IPTV and a mobile subscription the TV Plus package ...

KPN blames Digitenne price increase on fewer customers

Telecompaper (subscription)

In a message to customers, the operator said more and more subscribers are switching to its multi-play plans with IPTV. Digitenne is planned to increase in price ...

Vodafone launching its own fibre broadband and TV services in the ...

Ars Technica UK (blog)

At the very least, especially if its IPTV product is somewhat compelling, Vodafone may be able to stem the losses to Virgin, Sky, and BT, which are all rocking ...

Smart metering platforms: the answer to the national power crisis?

ITWeb

The group provides fixed network, mobile communications, Internet and IPTV products and services for consumers and ICT solutions for business customers and ...

Vodacom in talks with Naspers to carry DStv content

Telecompaper (subscription)

The group is also preparing to roll out an Internet Protocol Television (IPTV) service, offering video streaming to subscribers on an FTTH trial being conducted at ...

Amino Strengthens its TV-everywhere service offer by acquiring ...

EE Herald

... its capability in Cloud TV services where it has already delivering IP-based entertainment services on a range of IPTV devices. Amino says its IP entertainment ...

Verizon, Google Debate The Future Of Video 'Pipes,' Facebook's ...

AdExchanger

... Verizon's other video products include Intel Media's IPTV asset OnCue, acquired last March, which he said precipitated Verizon's drive for more video content.