

June 17, 2015, Daily News

Wednesday, 17 June 2015

Last Updated Wednesday, 17 June 2015

New modems to fuel superfast broadband over copper

PCWorld

Fast is needed for applications such as streaming 4K video (and in the future, 8K video), IPTV, cloud-based storage, and HD video calls. At the International CES ...

Rostelecom extends double-play summer promotion

Telecompaper (subscription)

Subscribers connecting to both fixed internet and IPTV services will be able pay the promotional price of RUB 299 per month until 30 September. All household ...

Norigin Media: "Long tail content can be moved to the cloud"

IPTV News

Ajey Anand: Every aspect of live TV can be managed within a cloud architecture. Infrastructure for OTT services has evolved slowly, but in the right direction.

BT chief exec: EE deal will give UK "digital champion"

IPTV News

BT's proposed acquisition of EE will create a 'true UK digital champion', according to BT Chief Executive Gavin Patterson. Patterson was backed by EE Chief ...

WWE to boost YouTube presence with gaming channel

IPTV News

WWE today launched UpUpDownDown, a new YouTube channel focusing on the world of video gaming. WWE already has a powerful presence on YouTube, ...

Smart home consumer demand "stagnating", says report

IPTV News

A new report by Argus Insights suggests that the home automation sector is quickly losing the momentum it gained in 2014, primarily because consumers are ...

Telus says Netflix, video services are driving more broadband usage

FierceTelecom-8 hours ago

Telus is not afraid of Netflix (NASDAQ: NFLX) eating away at its growing Optik IPTV business, but rather sees it as a complement and a way to drive further ...